Chris Roy at the Global Alpha Forum in Greenwich, CT – “The Active vs. Passive Debate Continues”

Chris Roy participated on an investment panel entitled “The Active vs. Passive Debate Continues” at the Global Alpha Forum held in Greenwich, CT. The audience included Family Office, Foundation, Endowment, and Pension Fund Investment Committee members from around the country interested in learning more about how Windrose approaches deploying active and passive investments across asset classes at different points in the market and business cycles. The conversation also revolved around how factors like global volatility and manager fees contribute to determining whether an active or passive investment is appropriate in a given market segment.

Global Alpha Forum provides both topical keynote speakers and issue driven panel discussions to the global investment industry, covering the current state of the alternative investment industry. Past speakers have included Larry Summers, former Secretary of the Treasury, and Rudy Giuliani, former Mayor of New York City.
